The 8 Decisions Every Page, Email and Invite Depends On

(write them down before you build anything)

1.

Offer

(what you sell, in one sentence)

If it takes a paragraph to explain, your landing page will take five. Say what the buyer gets, and by when.

Test: Can a stranger repeat it after one read?

2.

Method

(the name for how you deliver it)

A named method turns “we help with marketing” into something a buyer can picture, remember and repeat to their boss.

Test: Would you put the name on a slide?

3.

Value

(the one doubt a buyer has, answered)

Every buyer has one reason to doubt the offer. Write it down. Your page and your emails answer that doubt first.

Test: Can you name the doubt in one line?

4.

Buyer

(one persona, named narrowly)

Title, company size, the problem that keeps them up at night. A wide persona writes vague emails.

Test: Can you name three real people who fit?

5.

List

(clean prospects you can reach)

The list decides your reply rate before the copy does. Verified, matched to the persona, nothing scraped in a hurry.

Test: Would you email every row yourself?

6.

Funnel

(the one funnel you will build)

A live event, a short challenge or a direct call. Each needs different pages and different follow-ups. Pick one.

Test: Is there exactly one?

7.

Date

(the event topic, day and time)

A topic with a day and a time gives every invite a reason to say yes now, not someday.

Test: Is it on a calendar yet?

8.

Channels

(every account connected)

Email, LinkedIn, calendar and WhatsApp connected before you build, not during. New sending domains need time to warm up.

Test: Is every account signed in today?
