There are two types of automated funnels:

❌ Autopilot
✅ Assisted

One lets AI make the decisions. The other lets AI do the volume while people make the calls.

Here's where they split. Which one are you running?

Autopilot

It sends what nobody checked.

AI writes the email, picks the list and hits send. Nobody reads it first.

As a result: one wrong merge field or one made-up claim lands in every inbox on the list, at once, under your name.

Assisted

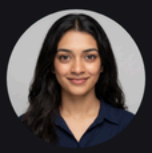

AI drafts. People approve.

AI still writes every draft, fast.

A person reads and approves each one before it goes out.

The agent can build anything, but it can’t send, launch, buy or delete without the owner’s own say-so.

✕ Autopilot

It decides who to call.

AI scores the leads and works the list on its own.

A buyer who wrote back with a real question gets a canned answer.

As a result: the warmest people in your funnel end up talking to a bot.

Assisted

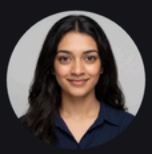

AI researches and sorts. People call.

AI reads each buyer's site and recent posts, and sorts the list.

Your team picks who to call, and answers real replies the same day, in their own words.

A reply nobody answered is the sale you already paid for.

Autopilot vs Assisted 5/9

Autopilot

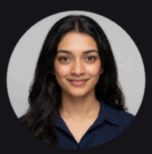

It guesses missing facts.

No case study for that industry? It writes one.

No price on file? It picks one.

As a result: it sounds sure, so nobody catches it until a buyer does.

Autopilot vs Assisted 6/9

Assisted

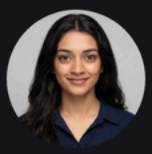

A missing fact stays a blank.

If the brief doesn't have it, the draft says [FILL].

A person fills it in or cuts the line.

Nothing goes out that you can't back up.
