Traffic is on.
Sign-ups are flat.

It's almost never the ads.

Funnels break in predictable places: the 4 automations behind the page.

01 Confirmation and reminders fire from the sign-up

02 The form lands in the CRM with its source

03 Behaviour tags arrive from the session platform

04 Bookings and payments move the stage

4 automations to check first

01 Confirmation and reminders fire from the sign-up

The form submit, not a person, starts every message.

Check:

- Confirmation plus calendar file
- Reminders 8am to 8pm their time
- SMS under 160 characters

02 The form lands in the CRM with its source

One contact per sign-up, tagged with the link they came from.

Check:

- Source, medium, campaign saved
- One tagged link per channel
- No duplicate contacts

03 Behaviour tags arrive from the session platform

When the session ends, every registrant gets one of two tags.

Check:

- Attended: book a call
- No-show: SMS in 5 minutes
- Same email in both tools

04 Bookings and payments move the stage

The buyer's next action moves them, not someone's memory.

Check:

- A booking moves the stage
- Every booked call confirmed within 5 minutes
- A payment moves them to won

01 Confirmation and reminders fire from the sign-up

What should happen

- The form submit triggers the confirmation and the calendar file, straight away
- Reminders go out on their clock, between 8am and 8pm their time
- The SMS reminder stays under 160 characters, with one link

Where it breaks

- The trigger listens to an old form, so real sign-ups get nothing
- Reminders go out in your time zone, not theirs

Check it: Sign up on the live page from your phone. The confirmation should land before you put it down.

02 The form lands in the CRM with its source

What should happen

- Every sign-up creates or updates one contact, never a second one
- The UTM source, medium and campaign are saved on that contact
- Each channel carries its own tagged link

Where it breaks

- A redirect drops the UTM tags, so every sign-up reads as direct
- A second form tool creates a second contact for the same person

Check it: Register through a tagged link, open the contact and read the source fields.

03 Behaviour tags arrive from the session platform

What should happen

- When the session ends, every registrant gets one tag: attended or no-show
- Attended starts the follow-up that books a call
- No-show gets an SMS within 5 minutes

Where it breaks

- The email in the session platform differs from the CRM, so nothing matches
- Everyone gets the same follow-up, whether they came or not

Check it: Attend the test session with one contact, skip it with another, then read both tags.

04 Bookings and payments move the stage

What should happen

- A booked call moves the contact to the next stage and stops the nurture emails
- A person confirms every booked call within 5 minutes
- A payment moves them to won and takes them off nurture

Where it breaks

- A buyer who booked still gets “did you miss it?” emails
- Stages move by hand, days later, so the pipeline is never current

Check it: Book a test call, then pay a test invoice. Watch the stage move both times.

The two-contact test

Before you touch the ads, run two test contacts through the whole funnel.

One who shows, one who doesn't. Tick each box as it happens.

A Shows up

- [ ] Signs up through a tagged link
- [ ] Gets the confirmation and reminders
- [ ] Shows up to the session
- [ ] Tagged attended, gets the book-a-call follow-up
- [ ] Books a call: the stage moves, nurture stops

B Doesn't show

- [ ] Signs up through a tagged link
- [ ] Gets the confirmation and reminders
- [ ] Doesn't show up
- [ ] Tagged no-show, gets an SMS within 5 minutes
- [ ] Stays in nurture until they book
