The Event Countdown Content Calendar

Set your session date first and plan backwards from it. 12 posts over the 4 weeks before the session: most of them teach, about 40% invite, and every one is dated before it is written.

The 4-week calendar

WEEK	DAY	DATE	TYPE	WHAT THE POST DOES
Week 1	Mon		Teach	The problem your buyer has
Week 1	Wed		Teach	The method, in one line
Week 1	Fri		Teach	A worked example
Week 2	Mon		Teach	The mistake to avoid
Week 2	Wed		Teach	The problem, from a new side
Week 2	Fri		Invite	Introduce the session: 13 days left
Week 3	Mon		Invite	What they leave with: 10 days left
Week 3	Wed		Teach	One step of the method
Week 3	Fri		Invite	Who it is for: 6 days left
Week 4	Mon		Invite	3 days left
Week 4	Tue		Teach	One last worked example
Week 4	Wed		Invite	The day before, with the time zone

5 invites out of 12 is about 40%. Move days to fit your week, but keep one post a day at most.

The rules

1. Date every post first
   Write the date before the words. Then "this Thursday" or "tomorrow" is only used where it is true on that day.
2. Teach more than you invite
   About 40% of the posts invite. The teaching posts are what make the invites worth reading.
3. Invite about every 3 days in the last two weeks
   The first invite goes out about two weeks before. Every invite names the date, time and time zone.
4. No link in the post
   The registration link goes in the first comment, tagged so you can see which post brought each sign-up.
5. Rotate the teaching posts
   The problem, the method, a worked example, the mistake to avoid. Then start again from a new side.

The prompt that plans it

Plan my countdown posts

YOUR TASK
Plan my posts for the 4 weeks before my live session, as a countdown.

THE FACTS TO USE
Session: [FILL: title, date, time and time zone]
Who it is for and what they leave with: [FILL]
My topics: [FILL: the problem, the method, a worked example, the common mistake]

RULES
- 12 posts over 4 weeks, at most one a day.
- About 40% invite people to the session (5 of 12). The rest teach one useful thing.
- Invites go out about every 3 days in the last two weeks.
- Date every post first. Any "this Thursday" or "tomorrow" must be true on the day the post goes out.
- No link in the post itself. The registration link goes in the first comment.

WHAT TO RETURN
A table: date, teach or invite, the topic, the first line, the first comment.

CHECK BEFORE YOU ANSWER
Count the invites. Check every date word against its post date.

Before each post goes out

- [ ] The date words in the post are true on the day it goes out.
- [ ] An invite post names the date, the time and the time zone.
- [ ] The link is in the first comment, not the post.
- [ ] No more than one post that day.
