

Ben Basil Tomy
Development Lead

One client. 11 live sessions.

765,105 people reached

6,517 registered

1,384 came live

Numbers like that only mean something when every sign-up is counted once.

• Measured, May 2025 to Feb 2026

Ben Basil Tomy
Development Lead

01

One tag rule on every link.

Source is the channel, medium is the type, campaign is the event, content is the version. Build links with a tool, never by hand.

```
?utm_source=email
&utm_medium=cold
&utm_campaign=your-event
&utm_content=variant_a
```

Ben Basil Tomy
Development Lead

02

The source, saved on the contact.

Hidden form fields carry the tags into your CRM, so every sign-up keeps where it came from.

contact	Test sign-up
utm_source	linkedin
utm_campaign	your-event
utm_content	variant_a

Ben Basil Tomy
Development Lead

03

One key event for a registration. One for a booked call.

Everything else is a page view, not a result.

generate_lead	registration
book_call	booked call

- Marked as key events. Nothing else is.

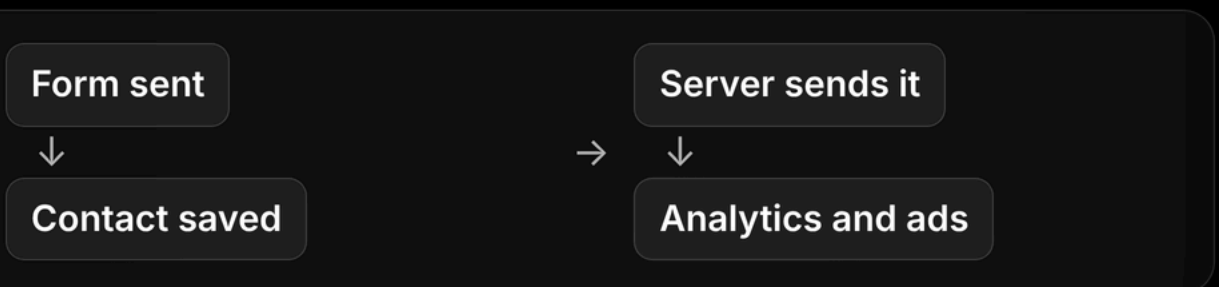

Ben Basil Tomy
Development Lead

04

Sent from the server, not just the browser.

Ad blockers and closed tabs drop browser events. Once the sign-up is saved, your server sends it too.

Ben Basil Tomy
Development Lead

05

A test sign-up shows up everywhere before any ad runs.

Register yourself through a tagged link, then check every place it should land.

- In the CRM, with its source
- One registration in analytics
- One conversion in the ad platform
- The confirmation email arrived

Ben Basil Tomy
Development Lead

06

The double-count traps.

Each one turns one sign-up into two.

- A thank-you page refresh fires it again
- Browser and server send it, no shared ID
- One person registers twice
- Two tools' totals added together

Ben Basil Tomy
Development Lead

We walk through the tracking in our free live workshop.

One tag rule on every link	01
The source saved on the contact	02
Two key events	03
Sent from the server	04
A test sign-up first	05
No double counts	06

From the link to the booked call. Link in the first comment.

• Free · live · 60 minutes