

Aquila Eldho
Automation Lead

7 Things To Do In The First 48 Hours After A Client Pays (Without Overwhelming Them):

Clients leave in the gap between paying and their first win.

The first 48 hours decide which side of that gap they land on.

Aquila Eldho
Automation Lead

1. The welcome goes out from the payment itself

Not when someone remembers to send it.

The payment webhook fires, the welcome email goes. Same minute, every time, nights and weekends included.

Their excitement is highest the day they pay. Meet it there.

Aquila Eldho
Automation Lead

2. Book the kick-off in that first message

Put the booking link in the welcome email, not in a follow-up three days later.

Ask them to pick a slot in the next few business days.

A kick-off on the calendar tells them this is already moving.

Aquila Eldho
Automation Lead

3. Name the first win and put a date on it

Ask what a win looks like, in their words. Write it down.

Then give it a date.

“Your reminders running by Friday” beats “we’ll get you set up.” (example)

Aquila Eldho
Automation Lead

4. One task for them, not ten

Hand a new client ten tasks and the one that matters gets buried.

Give them the one thing only they can do. Access, a login, a file.

Everything else is your job.

Aquila Eldho
Automation Lead

5. A fast first result

The longer the wait for a first real result, the wider the gap gets.

So build an on-ramp to one quick win, with nothing else on the path.

Small and soon beats big and later.

Aquila Eldho
Automation Lead

6. A place to belong

The reason they bought is rarely the reason they stay.

Get them into the community, and aim for a first win inside 7 days they can share there.

Peers who are winning are more convincing than you are.

Aquila Eldho
Automation Lead

7. Check in at hour 48

Not “how’s it going?”

Ask about the one task and the dated win. Is the access in? Is the kick-off booked? What’s in the way?

Make it a task that creates itself at hour 48, so nobody has to remember it.

Aquila Eldho
Automation Lead

What happens after the payment is part of the system.

We cover onboarding, step by step, in our free 60-minute live workshop.

The link is in the first comment.